U.S., Russia Resolve Poultry Dispute

U. S. Department of Agriculture

Zoellick said the U.S. would continue to work with Russian officials to ensure rapid and effective implementation of the agreement.

Undersecretary of Agriculture J.B. Penn said the veterinary certificate is the document that contains the rules and regulations that govern poultry trade with Russia. The certificate covers sanitary, health, shipping and documentation requirements. The Russians have also been concerned about fraud, tampering and duplication of the certificates, so the new certificate will be more tamper-proof.

Under the agreement, U.S. poultry-processing plants and coldstorage sites would be re-inspected according to the new standards by a team of Russian and U.S. specialists over the next nine months.

Russia imposed a ban on poultry exports to Russia on March 1, 2002. The ban was lifted on April 15, however Russia imposed other restrictions that severely limited U.S. poultry exports.

Poultry meat exports to Russia totaled 1,114,093 metric tons in 2001. For the first six months of 2002, exports fell 28 percent to 372,125.5 MT, compared to 516,874.9 MT for January through June 2001.

Huat Lai Plans to Export to Japan

In Malaysia, integrated poultry farm operator Huat Lai Resources Bhd plans to export eggs to Japan. Huat Lai is currently the largest local exporter of table eggs to Singapore. On average, it exports half its total daily output to Singapore, with occasional shipments to Hong Kong and Indonesia. Future plans include venturing into liquid pasteurized egg production, to cater mainly to industrial users in the bakery and food processing sector, by 2004.

The company is expected to invest RM12 million in seven additional modern multi-tiered layer farm houses to increase its commercial table egg production to 1.4 million eggs/day by the end of next year. The Malacca based company has 13 multi-tiered houses with 1.2 million layers producing about 950,000 eggs daily.

Verification-Inspection Points in Nuevo Laredo & Colombia

The deadline of October 12, 2002 for all poultry and meat verification-inspection points (VIPS) to be located on the Mexican side of the US-Mexican border is fast approaching. Fortunately, the number one crossing point for U.S. meat and poultry exports to Mexico, Nuevo Laredo/Colombia, appears to be ready for the change over. As of August 9, 2002, there are five VIPS in various stages of construction, of which one is already open for business.

Two others are finished and are expected to be staffed with SAGARPA (Secretariat of Agriculture, Livestock, Rural Development, Fisheries and Food) inspectors in time for the October 12, 2002, deadline, while construction on the remaining two is not expected to be finished until November and December 2002, respectively.

The three VIPS that will be ready have a combined 73 "doors" (i.e., slots for trailers to unload) between them, which is 8 more than the 65 doors that are currently operating out of the seven VIPS located on the U.S. side of the border. Come October 12, 2002, U.S. exporters of poultry and meat products crossing their product through Nuevo Laredo and Colombia should not experience many bottlenecks or back-ups.
